Arapahoe County honored with communication awards

Arapahoe County's Communication Services Department is the winner of three Bronze Quill Awards from the International Association of Business Communicators.

IABC is a worldwide network of communication professionals who are committed to the highest organizational communication standards. The professional organization was founded in 1970 and has more than 109 chapters and 13,000 members in 60 countries, including two chapters in Colorado. The Bronze Quill is IABC's highest local honor and recognizes excellence in communication management and communication skills.

Arapahoe County won Bronze Quills in the three categories: web site redesign, newsletter redesign and crisis communications campaigns and programs. Communication Services received Bronze Quills for its 2003 redesign of the web site www.co.arapahoe.co.us and its employee newsletter Countyline News, as well as a Bronze Quill for the County's handling of the two-year Tracy Baker Clerk and Recorder controversy.

This is the second year IABC has honored the County's Communication Services Department. In 2002, Arapahoe County received Bronze Quills for the redesign of the County logo and graphic standards manual.
