Speaking your language: Arapahoe/Douglas Works! hosts workshops in Spanish to help foreign language job seekers get ahead

Aurora, Colo. --- Arapahoe/Douglas Works! is hosting free job-seeker workshops, delivered entirely in Spanish, to bridge the job search information gap for experienced and qualified Spanish workers who do not speak English.

“We currently have up to 500 Spanish-speaking job seekers registered at Arapahoe/Douglas Works!, but we know the number of eligible workers in our Spanish community is much greater,” said Patricia K. Buys, Director of Arapahoe/Douglas Works!. “By hosting workshops in Spanish, we are making our services accessible to the Spanish community and providing valuable information about maximizing job opportunities, that we also provide our English-speaking job seekers.”

The two-hour workshop, Looking for employment in an effective manner, covers basic job search essentials including:

- How to begin your employment search
- The tools you need to carry out an employment search
- The job interview
- How to keep your new job
- How to use labor market information to your advantage.

The workshops will be held once a month at CentrePoint Plaza, 14980 E. Alameda Dr., in Aurora. The next session is due to scheduled for the week beginning April 11. Interested job seekers can register for the class by calling Petra Chavez at 303-636-1195.
